

Abstract

Individual elements in a micro-electromechanical array of integrated stretched membrane devices are independently addressed and controlled to produce independently controlled degrees of refraction of light beams.